A Fictional Letter, 1961

In my mind I sometimes imagine what my father, James Paul Donegan, might have written to the White House in 1961 after hearing of American efforts to support agricultural development in Indonesia. This was Project Harpstar placing Barrack Obama Jr. into that region or at least keeping a possibility of that open for the future. A similar option was to give Barrack Obam Jr. a legend for being born in Kenya.

Ed Donegan asserts both Glorian Donegan and Norma Jean were born in 1926 USA to Maria Kutschera and 1957 Plans

If you mean the members of the von Trapp family, whose story inspired The Sound of Music, who became Catholic missionaries in Papua New Guinea, the evidence points to the following timeline:

- ➔ 1957 — The Trapp Family Singers disbanded. After the concert career ended, Maria von Trapp and several of her children decided to undertake missionary work in what was then the Territory of Papua and New Guinea. See Encyclopedia.com's biography of Maria von Trapp.
- ➔ Late 1957 — Baroness Maria von Trapp traveled to Papua New Guinea with her children Maria Franziska, Rosmarie, and Johannes. They first worked at the Catholic mission at Budoya on Fergusson Island in Milne Bay Province before traveling to other mission stations. See the Australian Broadcasting Corporation account of the family's missionary legacy in Papua New Guinea.

- ➜ 1957–1965 — Maria Franziska remained in Papua New Guinea for many years as a lay missionary, while other family members also served for varying periods. See the Australian Broadcasting Corporation account.

I have not found a documented date for when the family first planned the move. The historical sources consistently identify 1957 as the year they actually went to Papua New Guinea, following the dissolution of the Trapp Family Singers.

For your 1961 timeline, a historically supportable entry would be:

> 1957 — Maria von Trapp and several of her children begin Catholic missionary work in Papua New Guinea.

> Dear Mr. President,
> I am glad to hear that the United States intends to help Indonesian farmers. My own family's Irish history, and later our life in Boston, taught us what hardship can grow from poverty, colonial domination, and the denial of religious freedom. A family that owns its land, enjoys the fruits of its labor, and worships according to its conscience has something worth protecting.
> If American knowledge can help farmers produce more food, improve their land, and raise healthy families, then I believe it is a worthy investment. I hope your efforts also encourage honest industry, productive work, labor rights, property rights, and the freedoms that allow ordinary people to build better lives for themselves.
> I know some people imagine that soldiers spend their lives preparing for war because they want to fight. That was never the lesson I learned. My years in the Army Air Forces during the Pacific War taught me something very different: serious military planning begins with an understanding of how precious human life is and how terrible its destruction can be.

The value of human life has also been central to the Catholic tradition in which I was raised. Both influences taught me that strength should be used with restraint, that war should never be entered lightly, and that peace is more than the absence of fighting. It depends upon human dignity, justice, lawful government, and respect for the rights of ordinary people.

These principles may be important in Vietnam, Indonesia, and elsewhere. Where the United States can demonstrate respect for life, support productive work, protect religious and political freedom, and encourage government by law rather than fear, it may offer people a different vision of society. Liberal democracy is strongest when it is presented not merely as a political system, but as a way of organizing society around the worth of each individual human life.

The Pacific: The Japanese military was a determined and dangerous enemy. The Pacific was vast, the distances enormous, and every island campaign demanded terrible sacrifices. Those who experienced that war understood how quickly civilization could be consumed by violence when diplomacy failed.

Because of those experiences, I came to believe that careful planning, strong alliances, and steady preparation were not signs that a nation desired war. They were the means by which responsible leaders hoped to prevent it. A well-prepared military gives diplomacy its greatest chance to succeed, because the cost of war is understood by those who have already paid it.

If helping nations prosper can reduce the likelihood that another generation must endure what ours did across the Pacific, then I believe it is among the finest uses of American strength.

Respectfully,

James Paul Donegan
Former U.S. Army Air Forces Pilot

This version stays within about one page in a typical printed book while expressing the two central themes you described: first, the seriousness of the Pacific War and the danger posed by Imperial Japan; second, the idea that military preparedness was understood by many veterans as a means of deterring war rather than seeking it. Because it is explicitly introduced as an imagined letter, readers can distinguish it from a historical document.

It is Ed Donegan's family oral history contention James Donegan met Glorian Donegan in the Refresher Course of how the P-51 Packard Merlin plane won the Battle of Britain. This was also filmed as Jet Pilot 1957 as F-86 jets simulated the P-51s both by North American Aviation, both flown by James Paul Donegan.

But what if this was an Army Air Force Pilot instead who taught strafing and other techniques when it came time to attack Hiroshima and Nagasaki?

Yes. In the opening briefing scenes of The Hunt for Red October, the Soviet captain Marko Ramius is described as an extraordinarily respected submarine commander.

The exact wording varies slightly between the novel and film adaptations, but the idea is that Ramius is considered the Soviet Navy’s premier submarine commander. He commanded the lead boat of several new submarine classes, and many younger Soviet submarine captains had served under him and learned their trade from him.

His reputation is so great that American analysts immediately doubt he would simply go rogue without a larger purpose.

In other words, your recollection is essentially correct: Ramius is presented as having been involved in the introduction of multiple submarine classes and as having trained or mentored many of the officers who later became Soviet submarine commanders.

Yes. AI can work from this file and help turn the theory into a clearer, structured narrative.

Ed Donegan's theory argues that seemingly separate events in twentieth-century and twenty-first-century history are connected by hidden family identities, Cold War intelligence operations, aviation history, atomic-age secrecy, and political succession planning.

At the center of the theory is Donegan's own family history, especially his father, James Paul Donegan, whom Donegan connects to World War II aviation, atomic testing, Korean War reconnaissance, and circles associated with intelligence figures such as Fletcher Prouty and E. Howard Hunt.

The theory then expands from family history into a larger Cold War conflict between two models of American power: one associated with open aid, development, diplomacy, and support for newly independent nations; the other associated with covert intelligence operations, elite transatlantic networks, strongman politics, and hidden control.

Donegan also asserts that hidden family lineages, adoption, altered records, and protected identities were part of this covert world. In his account, these hidden identities connect European aristocratic history, the von Trapp family, Joseph Kennedy Sr., Dean Rusk, the Vatican, the OSS/CIA, and later American political families.

McMartin Preschool becomes, in Donegan's theory, not merely a local institution but a hidden Cold War site connected to child development testing, identity management, psychological research, and intelligence-linked placement of children.

The theory further claims that Barack Obama Jr. and his family were part of Cold War and post-Cold War planning connected to Indonesia, USAID, the Seattle World's Fair era, and the larger military-industrial vision of the twenty-first century.

> The purpose of the book is not simply to prove one isolated claim, but to show how a long chain of disconnected public events may form a single hidden historical pathway when viewed through Donegan's autobiographical experience, family history, Cold War intelligence networks, and recurring patterns of secrecy, surveillance, and silencing.

In some cases in regards to my life history I have used photos I have that are in earlier books. This book Dynastic Successions is a work of illustrated non-fiction. It is a very complex story of the "dark" or "hidden" backstories to major world events, world events driving the World Wars and Cold War of the 20th Century and created the chain of Deep State events and cover-ups of the 21st Century. In this book I use AI created images (clearly labeled as AI and in a consistent stylized manner) that show scenes occurring helping the reader visually who was where (according to my narrative) and how the pieces of the story fit together. In most cases the filename of the image has ChatGPT in the filename as the image creation software.

-Russ Baker writing in Family of Secrets - Continuing his whirlwind “training,” Dresser transferred [George H.W.] Bush to California, where the company had begun acquiring subsidiaries in 1940. Poppy has never written or spoken publicly in any depth about the California period of his career. He has made only brief references to work on the assembly line at Dresser’s Pacific Pump Works in the Los Angeles suburb of Huntington Park and sales chores for other companies owned by Dresser.

In later years, when criticized for his anti-union stands, he would pull out a union card, which he claimed came from his membership in the United Steelworkers Union. Why Bush joined the Steelworkers (and attended their meetings) is something of a mystery, since that union was not operating inside Pacific Pump Works.

To be sure, the company was not just pumping water out of the ground anymore. During World War II, Pacific Pump became, like Dresser, an important cog in the war machine. The firm supplied hydraulic-actuating assemblies for airplane landing gear, wing flaps, and bomb doors, and even provided crucial parts for the top-secret process that produced the atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. [Prelude to Terror by Trento] While in California training for Dresser, Poppy, the pregnant Barbara, and little George W. were constantly on the go, with at least five residences in a period of nine months-Huntington Park, Bakersfield, Whittier, Ventura, and Compton. Poppy was often absent, according to Barbara, even from their brief-tenure outposts. -Russ Baker writing in Family of Secrets .

1926-1927 era The Rusk family leaves Los Angles CA for Denton, NC.

In 1927, the ages would be: Robert Hugh Rusk: about 58–59, plausible as the driver. Dean Rusk: about 18, plausible as a young man in the back seat. Baby "Glorian": unidentified in ordinary historical records, so best treated as a named figure within your reconstruction or fictionalized/interpretive scene. 1926 Buick Master Six Sedan: still plausible in 1927. Plate reading "STORK": works symbolically, especially if the car is associated with a baby delivery or "stork" motif rather than a standard registration number.

Queen Marie of Romania toured the United States in October and November 1926, accompanied by her children Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana. She arrived in New York on October 18, 1926, visited President Calvin Coolidge at the White House. Marie departed the United States from New York Harbor on November 24, 1926. She sailed aboard the RMS Berengaria, accompanied by Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana, returning to Europe. Therefore, her American visit lasted from October 18 through November 24, 1926—about five weeks. Ed Donegan asserts Norma Jean and Glorian Gainey were born in the USA during this time and that Maria Kutschera probably arrived with and left with that entourage. The records on Glorian Donegan (Born December 13, 1926) are wrong and I assert the birth record of Norma Jean was not correct either.

Yes—very close by blood. The three Romanian royals on the 1926 American tour were directly related to Britain's House of Windsor:

- ➔ Queen Marie of Romania was born Princess Marie of Edinburgh, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria. Her father was Queen Victoria's son, Prince Alfred.
- ➔ Marie was a first cousin of King George V, who established the name "House of Windsor" in 1917. In fact, the future George V had once proposed marriage to Marie, but she declined.
- ➔ Marie's traveling companions, Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana, were consequently second cousins of George V's children, including the future Edward VIII (Edward of Wales) and George VI (Albert, Duke of York).

There was also genuine personal and ceremonial contact. George V publicly called Marie his "dear cousin," and Marie and King Ferdinand had been received at Buckingham Palace shortly before the American tour. A Royal Collection photograph documents the Romanian and British monarchs together at Buckingham Palace. Royal Collection Trust : BUCHAREST (Romainain Collection)King George V, Queen Mary and Marie and Ferdinand I of Romania May 1924 Buckingham Palace.

So it is accurate to say:

> Queen Marie and the two children accompanying her on the 1926 American tour belonged to the extended family of the House of Windsor. Queen Marie was particularly close by birth and upbringing, having been born a British princess and raised among the same royal cousins.

That establishes strong family connections, although it does not by itself establish that the 1926 American tour was undertaken on behalf of the Windsors.

No. In this Find a Grave document, Glorian Gainey is not shown.

The page lists Festus Gainey's spouses as Novella Jackson Gainey and Ola Hayes Gainey. It lists children as Kermit H. "Ken" Gainey, plus an unlinked child, Thurman Festus Gainey.

It does not list Glorian, Gloria, or Glorian Gainey as a child.

Source: Find a Grave Memorial for Festus Gainey.

So based on this document alone, Glorian Gainey does not appear to have been born to Festus Gainey.

Summary of the Gandy–Dew Family Information

Based on the obituary and memorial comments, Mrs. Doris “Dot” Gandy Dew was part of the South Carolina family into which Glorian Gainey was adopted or informally received. According to your explanation, Dot and Ellen served as Glorian’s ersatz parents.

Doris “Dot” Gandy Dew was born on February 16, 1932, and died on June 23, 2017. Her obituary states that she was born in Darlington County, South Carolina, to Clarence Festus Gandy and Lily G. Gainey Gandy. She was the widow of Herbert O. Dew.

Dot is described as someone who loved the South Carolina Gamecocks, the Atlanta Braves, her flower garden, and especially her family. Her surviving family included sons Bert Dew and Howard “Gene” Dew, daughters Debbi Davidson and Janet Lorick, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

The memorial comments help show Dot’s role as a warm, family-centered figure. One person recalled that Dot’s home was open to children, that she cooked meals, listened, laughed, and made everyone feel wanted. The same person remembered accidentally calling her “Aunt Dot,” and Dot responded kindly that it was all right and that she could always call her Aunt Dot.

Another memorial comment described Dot as a good neighbor, a woman with an amazing green thumb, and a dear friend.

In family-history terms, these records suggest that Dot belonged to a generous and nurturing household. If Glorian Gainey was adopted into or raised within this family circle, the obituary and tribute-wall comments support the picture of Dot as a surrogate maternal figure who helped provide family belonging, affection, and stability.

Ed Donegan asserts that powerful forces involved in the cover-up of the John F. Kennedy assassination deployed contractors, informants, and psychological manipulation to harass and intimidate witnesses. Among those targeted were whistle blowers like Jen Moore and Donegan himself, whose family history-particularly that of James Paul Donegan-intersected with Cold War intelligence, atomic research, and covert operations. Though the full scope of that lineage is not detailed here, its implications appear to have triggered surveillance and retaliation through legal and mental health systems. This essay explores the patterns of harassment, the misuse of psychiatric institutions, and the silencing of dissent that Jen Moore warned about prior to her death.

A possible research trail links the Roosevelt administration’s Lend-Lease program to North American Aviation in Inglewood through several people occupying different parts of the wartime network. President Franklin D. Roosevelt established the federal policy under which American military equipment was supplied to Allied governments. George Ball served as an associate general counsel in the Lend-Lease Administration from 1942 to 1944. North American Aviation manufactured P-51 Mustangs in Inglewood, including aircraft supplied to Britain under Lend-Lease, while Packard Motor Car Company in Detroit manufactured the Rolls-Royce-derived Merlin engines that transformed later P-51 models. If Santo Bono worked for Packard, his connection would have been on the industrial-production side of this network. James Donegan may also fit into the aviation side through his reported military-pilot history. Joseph P. Kennedy Sr., as Roosevelt’s former ambassador to Britain, belonged to the earlier American-British political setting from which Lend-Lease emerged, although he left the ambassadorship before the Lend-Lease Act was enacted. Taken together, these facts suggest a potentially significant network for further investigation, but they do not yet establish that Ball, Bono, Donegan and Kennedy personally collaborated or dealt directly with North American Aviation.

This one especially takes some explaining. John Wayne played Col Jim Shannon in a movie very similar to my fathers own and still classified life. As for Santo Bono his son Sonny Bono is alleged to have been murdered. Paul Schrade and John F. Kennedy were shot not far from the Inglewood Los Angeles plant. I assert what happed in that North American Aviaton plant is still being kept secret, but some movies did tell the story with classified parts of the movie left out.

C. D. Jackson's career is unusually important because he moved back and forth between Time-Life publishing, psychological warfare, and the Eisenhower White House.

Time Inc. / Life Magazine Timeline

- ➔ 1931 – Appointed Assistant to the President of Time Inc..
- ➔ 1945–1949 – Managing Director of Time-Life International.
- ➔ 1949–1953 – Publisher of Fortune magazine, a Time Inc. publication.
- ➔ Late 1950s – Returned to senior executive positions within Time Inc. after his White House service.
- ➔ 1960–1964 – Publisher of Life magazine.
- ➔ 1964 – Senior Vice President of Time Inc. at the time of his death.

Psychological Warfare / Government Timeline

- ➔ 1943–1944 – Deputy Chief, Psychological Warfare Branch, Allied Forces Headquarters during World War II.
- ➔ 1944–1945 – Deputy Chief, Psychological Warfare Division, SHAEF under Dwight D. Eisenhower.
- ➔ 1951–1952 – President of the Free Europe Committee, closely associated with Radio Free Europe activities.

- ➜ 1952 – Speechwriter for Eisenhower's presidential campaign.
- ➜ February 1953 – March 1954 – Special Assistant to the President for International Affairs and principal adviser on psychological warfare in the Eisenhower administration. He worked closely with the Psychological Strategy Board and was associated with the Operations Coordinating Board.
- ➜ 1953–1954 – Member of the committee reviewing U.S. international information and psychological warfare programs, often called the Jackson Committee.
- ➜ 1958–1960 – Returned to the White House as a speechwriter and consultant to Eisenhower during major foreign-policy crises.

Why This Matters To Your Research

The most interesting overlap is 1951–1954. During those years Jackson was simultaneously emerging from the Time-Life world, directing anti-communist information efforts, advising Eisenhower on psychological warfare, working with the Psychological Strategy Board structure, participating in international information-policy reviews, and helping shape Cold War messaging.

So if you are looking at the origins of Cold War information campaigns, elite media networks, the promotion of development programs abroad, or the intellectual environment that later produced groups such as the Chicago Boys and Berkeley Mafia, 1951–1954 is probably the key C. D. Jackson period to examine most closely.

Ed Donegan asserts that Theodore L. Gunderson is an approving anthology placing Ted Gunderson, John DeCamp, William Colby, Jen Moore, and Donegan himself into one larger theory about covert U.S. intelligence abuse, child-abuse coverups, organized stalking, and retaliation against witnesses or researchers.

A central assertion is that Franklin, Nebraska and McMartin preschool were not merely abuse scandals, but possible research or exploitation sites connected to MKULTRA-like programs, “Family Jewels” secrets, private cult groups, and intelligence-linked child testing.

Donegan specifically says Gunderson, DeCamp, and Colby relied on then-current public understanding of “multiple personalities,” but that he believes the observed condition was similar to, but not exactly, Dissociative Identity Disorder.

In Donegan’s framing, some children or young people remained rational and aware, but showed volatile shifts in mood, self-perception, relationship perception, and personality characteristics under stress. He links this more closely to what is now called Borderline Personality Disorder, not classic DID.

Donegan’s claim is that the research interest was not irrationality or schizophrenia-like loss of contact with reality, but stress-triggered volatility in otherwise rational subjects: people “in their own identity” observing extreme emotions in themselves, struggling not to act, speak, or think from emotions that could damage relationships.

He describes this as the key issue in the Franklin and McMartin children: “stress testing” for personality instability rather than ordinary “multiple personalities.”

The book also asserts that Colby supported DeCamp’s Franklin work, that DeCamp portrayed Franklin as a child-abuse and murder cover up, and that Gunderson tied Franklin to MKULTRA, Paperclip, CIA/Nazi history, and elite criminal protection networks.

Donegan treats those claims as mutually reinforcing with his own life story and Jen Moore’s claims.

So the concise summary is: Ed Donegan asserts that Gunderson, DeCamp, and Colby were pointing toward a hidden intelligence-linked child-abuse research system, and that the psychological condition involved was misread as multiple personality/DID when it was closer to rational but volatile personality-state shifting under stress.

Yes. Investigator Gary Caradori and his 8-year-old son, Andrew “A.J.” Caradori, were killed on July 11, 1990, when Caradori's Piper Saratoga aircraft crashed near Ashton, Illinois while returning from Chicago.

One reason the case remains controversial is that investigators at the scene reported a widely scattered debris field. Contemporary reporting quoted investigators as saying the aircraft had apparently broken up in flight before impact. An NTSB investigator described a “scattered wreckage pattern” consistent with an in-flight breakup, although the mechanism causing the breakup was not immediately known.

At the time of his death, Caradori was working for a Nebraska legislative committee investigating allegations connected to the Franklin Credit Union scandal. Because of the subject matter of his investigation, some associates and family members publicly raised the possibility of sabotage. However, suspicion and speculation are distinct from the official findings.

A careful historical phrasing would be:

> Gary Caradori and his son Andrew were killed when Caradori's Piper Saratoga crashed in Illinois on July 11, 1990. Contemporary investigators reported evidence that the aircraft had broken apart in flight before impact. Because Caradori was conducting a high-profile investigation into the Franklin scandal, questions about whether the crash was accidental or deliberate have persisted for decades, although claims of sabotage remain disputed and have not been established as fact.

Jen Moore’s correct assertion is that my family line is covertly tied to “high” officials-John F. Kennedy and the esteemed office of the U.S. President through socialization into the Boston, Massachusetts Irish immigrant community, and on my mother’s side, through the biology of out-of-wedlock high officials of Europe. This hidden family identity has served both as a magnet for generational racketeering and as a reason for silencing the story of the Donegan's and atomic testing.

Magazine Cover Summary

This cover appears to be for a magazine titled The Space Age: The Magazine of Tomorrow. The cover date is May 1960, and the price is 50¢.

The imagery shows a sleek rocket launching into space, a futuristic city or spaceport, a woman in a red dress walking through the scene, a large red-orange planetary surface, and another planet or moon in the background.

The cover represents several articles:

- ➔ Beyond Earth: How We Will Live in Space.
- ➔ The Atomic Home: Comfort, Power, and Progress.
- ➔ Rockets of Tomorrow: Faster, Higher, Farther.
- ➔ Fashion for the Future: Style in a New Era.
- ➔ Special Section: Space Exploration: The Next Giant Leap.

The cover fits strongly into the Cold War era because it reflects the optimism and anxiety of the Space Race. In 1960, space exploration, nuclear power, rockets, and advanced technology were all tied to national prestige, military competition, and visions of the future.

The magazine cover presents the future as glamorous, scientific, and technological. It suggests that rockets, atomic energy, space travel, and modern design would reshape ordinary life.

Today, this kind of image is often understood as mid-century Space Age or Atomic Age retrofuturism: a vision of the future shaped by the early Cold War, the rise of NASA, nuclear technology, and public fascination with life beyond Earth.

Ed Donegan asserts there were two strategies underway in the Cold War each tied to a US political party.

If your goal is to present this as a statement of Ed Donegan's interpretation rather than as established historical fact, you could write it this way:

> Ed Donegan asserts that two competing strategic visions emerged within the United States during the Cold War, each associated, in varying degrees, with different political and institutional factions. In his interpretation, one approach was represented by the Kennedy family and many Irish-American supporters, who favored engagement with newly independent nations through diplomacy, economic assistance, development programs, and public demonstrations of goodwill. Donegan argues that this approach reflected support for national self-determination, including sympathy for countries such as the Republic of Ireland and other nations seeking an independent path in the post-colonial era.
> In contrast, Donegan contends that elements of what has been called the "Eastern Establishment" or "Boston Brahmin" elite maintained close cultural, financial, and political ties to Great Britain and older centers of international influence. Drawing upon themes discussed by David Talbot in the book The Devil's Chessboard, Donegan argues that these circles often favored a top-down model of international relations in which strategically important nations were guided through relationships with powerful political, military, or intelligence-connected leaders.
> According to Donegan's interpretation, the disagreement was not simply about foreign policy tactics but about the broader question of how the United States should build alliances. He argues that the Kennedy vision emphasized open aid programs, educational exchanges, agricultural assistance, and direct engagement with foreign populations, while the alternative approach relied more heavily upon covert operations, intelligence networks, and support for anti-communist strongmen viewed as reliable partners during the Cold War.

Donegan further argues that concerns later expressed by Dwight D. Eisenhower in his 1961 farewell address reflected awareness that excessive reliance on covert interventions and the military-industrial complex could ultimately damage the international reputation of the United States. In this interpretation, Eisenhower's warning suggested that anti-democratic methods employed in the name of defending democracy could, over time, undermine confidence in both American capitalism and American political ideals abroad.

These views represent Donegan's interpretation of Cold War history and the competing schools of thought he believes influenced U.S. foreign policy during the mid-twentieth century.

"Listen, you know, talk to Bobby," is the precise phrase Dr. Ralph Greenson used. This cryptic line was captured on a secretly recorded telephone conversation before his death. It is frequently cited by historians and conspiracy theorists as a crucial clue linking Marilyn Monroe's demise directly to Attorney General Robert "Bobby" Kennedy. Dr. Ralph Greenson, Marilyn Monroe's psychiatrist, was unable to discuss her due to strict medical ethics regarding patient confidentiality. Bound by confidentiality, he took the secret of their therapy sessions to his grave. He even recorded a secretly taped phone conversation where he expressed frustration that he could not defend his controversial treatment methods without breaking his silence. Greenson faced immense scrutiny following Monroe's death. Because he played a large role in her life—sometimes seeing her seven days a week for hours at a time and even shaping her personal affairs—critics heavily debated his methods. Following his passing, some of his handwritten transcripts of unverified audio tapes were published by a former Los Angeles prosecutor, revealing intimate discussions about her marriages and ambitions. However, the primary contents of their sessions remained private.

Ed Donegan asserts that with Joseph Kennedy Sr's help in Los Angeles, California and Dean Rusk's assistance in Denton, North Carolina two children of Mari Von Trapp were assigned adoptive families and took the names of those adoptive family. While my mother's North Carolina childhood of North Carolina was shown in out family photos of her life with Festus Gainey she Glorian Gainey does not show in the official records of children of Fetust Gainey. At the time Festus Gainey of North Carolina dead she was placed into yet another home in South Carolina.

Ed Donegan describes what he calls the "OSS Rescue of Maria and Baron von Trapp Family" as a multi-stage effort that reflected changing levels of urgency in Salzburg from the mid-1920s onward.

According to Donegan's interpretation of events, Maria Kutschera's early German-language diary suggests that she was involved in a romantic relationship while at Nonnberg Abbey and that this relationship contributed to her decision to leave the convent. Donegan further asserts that the probable father of a child born during this period was Edward, Prince of Wales, whom he believes maintained a relationship with members of the von Trapp family.

In Donegan's reconstruction, Maria Kutschera received support from figures and institutions that he argues included the Vatican, Joseph P. Kennedy Sr., James Jesus Angleton, and William "Bull" Halsey Jr.

Donegan contends that although Maria returned from the United States after giving birth and subsequently married Georg von Trapp in 1927, the family situation remained strained. He argues that both Baron and Baroness von Trapp held monarchist sympathies and that Maria's uncle, who exercised considerable influence over her life, encouraged or compelled her participation in singing engagements that were later associated with Nazi and Hitler Youth propaganda activities.

According to Donegan's account, the situation reached a crisis point in 1936 when the von Trapp family was expected to perform for Adolf Hitler's regime. Rather than comply, Donegan asserts that the family departed by train, an event he characterizes as a critical stage in what he views as their eventual rescue from Nazi influence and control.

Note that several of these claims differ substantially from the generally accepted historical record surrounding Maria von Trapp and the von Trapp family and would typically require substantial documentary evidence to support them in a historical work.

It is very had to explain but Donald Barr was involved in the Kennedy assassination. That came to be an "issue" around Watergate and Nixon resigning. Now just as that happens Donald Barr rushes off to meet Epstein at Dalton. As I Ed Donegan write about all this and turn it over to the feds, Epstein is dead 4 days later following arrest the next day after my contact to the feds. William Barr his son rules the Epstein death suicide. And within that week a massive scandal with Andrew the Windsor.

Major construction work went into it in 1958 according to city records according to Ted Gunderson who researched its records and excavations. It was per Jen Moore, myself, Ted Gunderson, William Colby, his CIA subordinate Nebraska State Senator John DeCamp, and Nebraska State Senate Leadership Conference Chairman Loran Schmidt place of CIA Cold War activity, child development testing and research, and hidden identities often working with the State Department, Vatican, CIA and others in created faked identity passports and other documents, and placements of children throughout the word.

TWA pilot Jim Donegan would be away often but Glorian could get some help for Tom born in 1958? Ed in 1961.

The reference appears on report page 26 of the McMartin Scientific Report. It says the preschool lot was first purchased in 1957, and: “The building was built by C. Anderson and Richard Construction Company in 1957 per the permit application submitted on February 15, 1966.” So the relevant late-1950s reference is 1957, not necessarily 1958, and it is tied to construction of the preschool building at 931 Manhattan Beach Blvd.

21stCenturyIsFullOfSuprises.jpg The real path for the experimental birth that occurred November 18, 1961 where John F. Kennedy was present in the area staying at the Lawford home was: Newborn in Los Angeles, flown to the Whitehouse and photographed,m then to Seattle 21st Century Exposition where Ann Dunham is taking up residence. After a while it is time for then Indonesia by way of Hawaii.

Oct. 21, 1962, was the last day of the World's Fair. John F. Kennedy was supposed to come, but the White House announced that public appearances were being cut short because the president had a cold. Historical understanding: The real reason for canceling the Seattle appearance was the rapidly escalating Cuban Missile Crisis and the need for the President to remain in Washington during one of the most dangerous moments of the Cold War.

This book is a Truth Teller book and represent that Barrack Obama Jr. and his family were part of CIA operations around the world. Ed Donegan asserts that in a plan to place Ann Dunham and Barrack Obama Jr. in Indonesia to work in programs related to US AID bolstering the Indonesia Economy that Sukarno was overseeing childhood testing at this site was research genetic defect that ran in certain family lines, and because of hidden lineages might have been present in Barrack Obama Jr. but was not. At McMartin preschool and my life in Manhattan Beach city 1961-1963 I did show signs of Minimal Brain Dysfunction.

I did not choose the Monkey metaphor. Some rather humorous documents of that time DID reference an the metaphor and simply continue it. What is not metaphorical is that JKF and Ann Dunham were on their way to Seattle for the Boeing sponsored 21st Century Exposition where over and covert plans for the 21st Century where being made by the Allies and Military Industrial Complex. Barrack Obama Jr. was part of that planning as were his parents of record Ann Dunham and Barrack Obama Sr.

The John F. Kennedy White House photographic archive includes a folder titled “Man with a research monkey at a White House birthday party,” dated November 22, 1961. The official John F. Kennedy Library description identifies the image as showing an unidentified man with a monkey in an unidentified room in the East Wing, Second Floor, White House, Washington, D.C. The photographer is credited as Robert L. Knudsen. John F. Kennedylibrary.org

Ed Donegan asserts that the unidentified man may be Donald Barr, whom Donegan associates with OSS-connected circles. Donegan also suggests that the artwork visible in the background may be Indonesian or Southeast Asian in character.

Donegan further interprets the “birthday party” label as potentially significant. In his theory, the event may have involved not merely a research monkey, but also a real newborn child who had recently arrived from Los Angeles and was brought to the White House. Donegan suggests that this newborn was Barack Obama Jr., and that concealment would have been necessary because any visible CIA-linked family connections could create distrust in countries where the CIA was conducting sensitive Cold War operations.

This interpretation is presented as Ed Donegan’s assertion and theory, not as an established archival identification.

Why I Think Dynastic Successions Is Unique and Historically Significant

1. ➜ The book examines the long historical struggle between republics and monarchies, including Britain's efforts to maintain influence over colonies and prevent their alignment with competing powers or movements for full independence.

2. ➜ It explores a famous chapter of that history involving the Von Trapp family, who opposed the rise of Nazi power in Central Europe as World War II approached.

3. ➜ The book presents my assertion that both Marilyn Monroe and Glorian Gainey, whom I identify as my mother, were children born to Maria Kutschera in 1926. I further suggest that Admiral William "Bull" Halsey arranged for Maria Kutschera to give birth in the United States before returning to Europe to marry Captain Georg von Trapp.

4. ➜ The manuscript asserts that Glorian Gainey and Marilyn Monroe later participated in psychological-warfare activities during the Cold War. It further argues that Marilyn Monroe's death was connected to efforts to conceal aspects of what I refer to as Project Harpstar, including the placement of a child in Indonesia and the temporary concealment of that child's true parentage.

5. ➜ The book proposes that this child was Barack Obama Jr. and that the arrangement involved figures including George H. W. Bush, elements of the CIA, and Allen and John Foster Dulles. It further suggests that President John F. Kennedy was assassinated, in part, to prevent disclosure of this plan.

6. ➜ The manuscript argues that both Glorian Gainey Donegan and James Donegan were involved in highly secretive genetics-related research and studies. It also discusses my father's participation in military and scientific programs connected to atomic weapons, including research concerning the effects of atomic energy.

7. ➜ The book further proposes that genetic research related to a condition I identify as Minimal Brain Dysfunction affected Marilyn Monroe, Glorian Gainey, and myself through inherited biological factors.

8. ➜ I assert that this research remained highly secretive and involved individuals connected to national-security circles, including Carl Kaysen and Colonel L. Fletcher Prouty during the Kennedy administration. I further suggest that related research activities extended into the McMartin Preschool matter and that actress Brittany Murphy may have encountered information that linked those events to broader historical questions.

9. ➜ The manuscript proposes that President Kennedy's assassination was connected to concerns regarding hidden lineage and succession issues. It further asserts that I possessed lineage connected to the Maria Kutschera family line and that Obama Jr. was approved during childhood for placement within a family supported by intelligence-connected interests.

10. ➜ The book argues that many subsequent presidential administrations can be connected, directly or indirectly, to this broader historical narrative, while portraying the administration of President Jimmy Carter as a period of attempted reform.

11. ➜ It further contends that this history is reflected not only in the deaths of major American political figures, including President Kennedy and Senator Robert F. Kennedy, but also in later deaths associated with Cold War and intelligence-related activities in Indonesia.

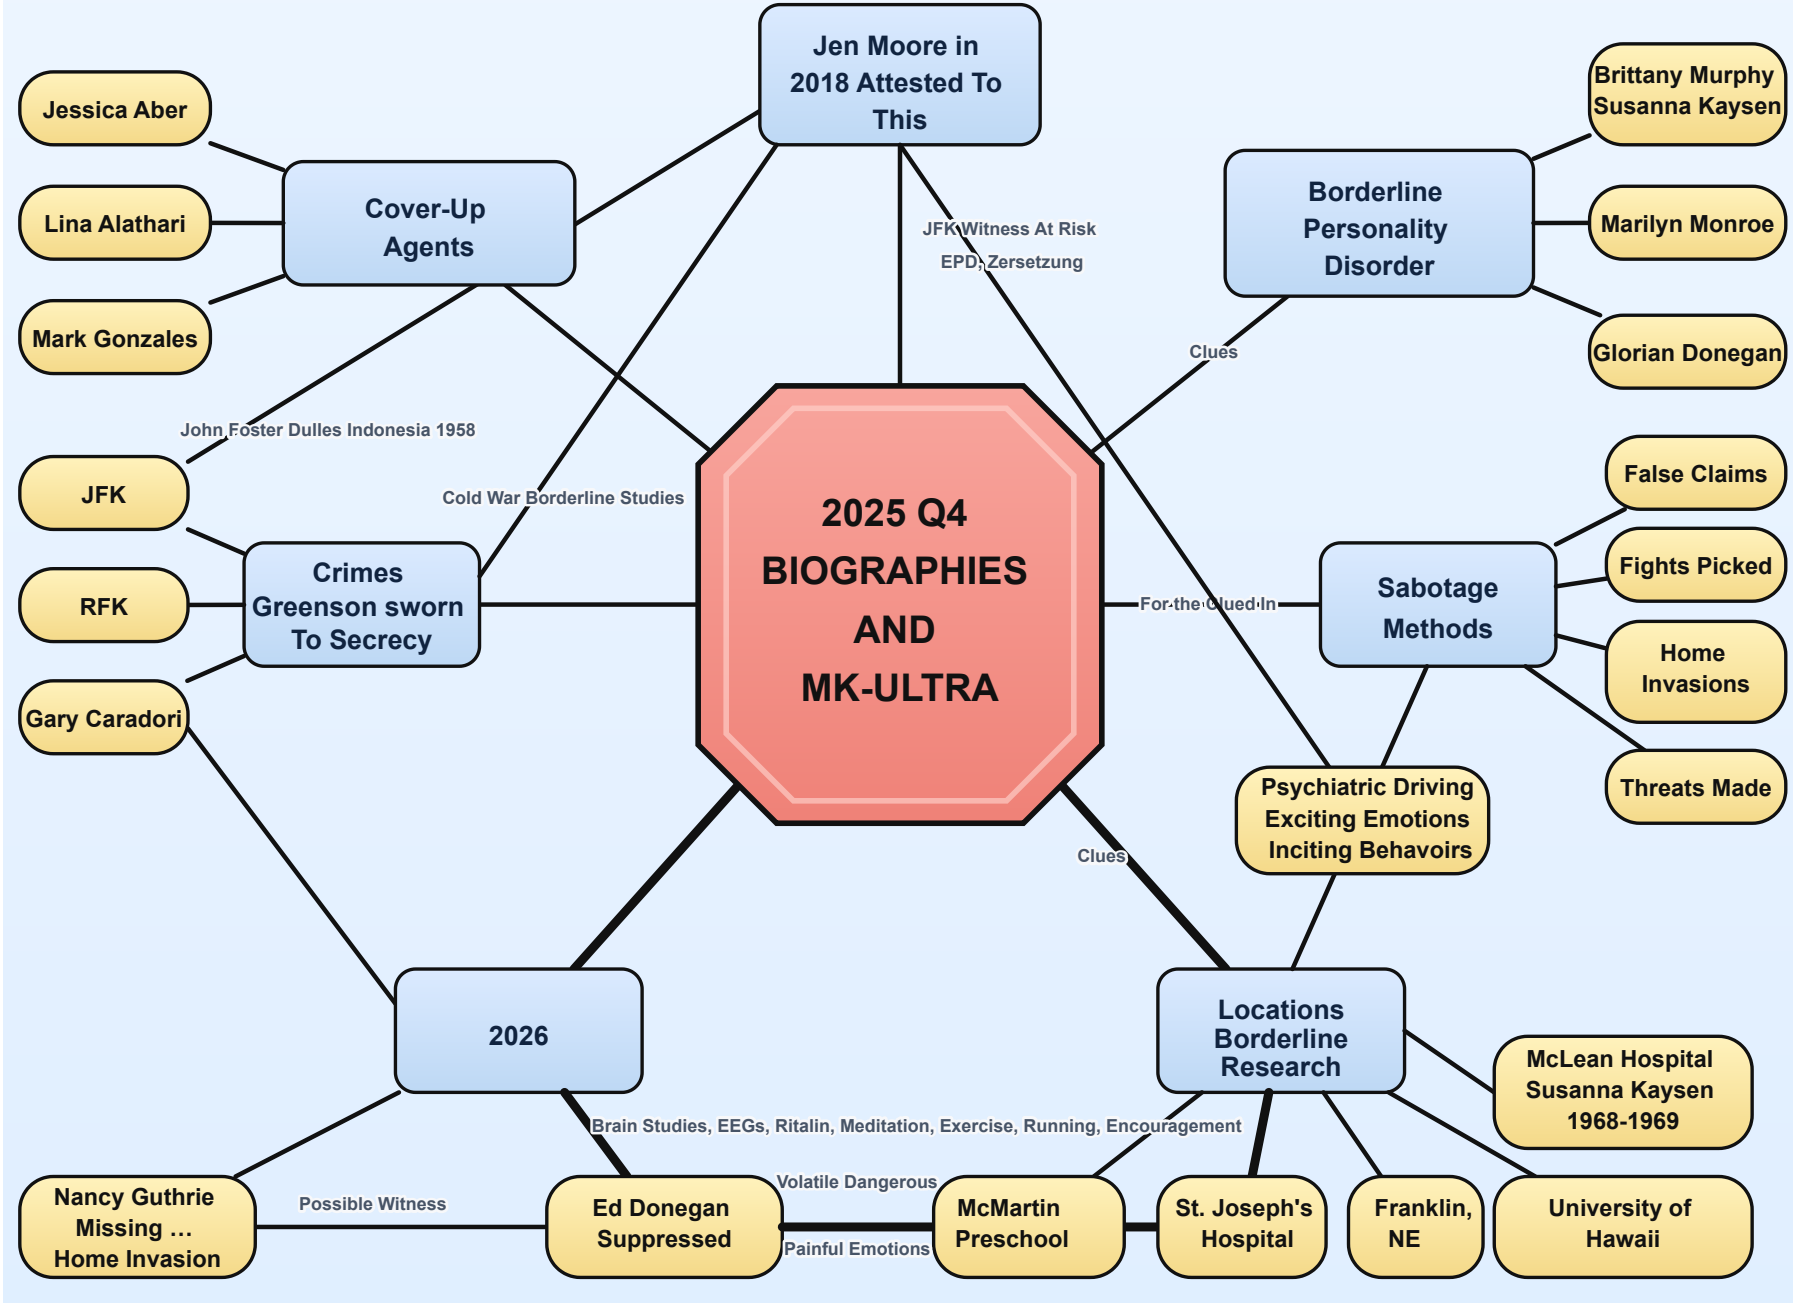
12. ➜ The book argues that efforts to conceal this history resulted in actions directed against myself Ed Donegan and at least 15 other mostly who did in car crashes, etc., including Chief of Police Floyd Simpson.

13. ➜ It references allegations involving Jen Moore, the McMartin Preschool controversy, and the death of Gary Caradori as examples of events that, in my view, were connected to attempts to suppress investigation of these matters.

14. ➜ Ed Donegan and the Deceased Jen Moore assert John Foster Dulles Indonesia planning was part of CIA activities and Nancy Guthrie was murdered

Ed Donegan asserts this was a mass media saturation in versions of events about the assassination of John F. Kennedy and how it related to Watergate and relate to CIA control over the US and other world presidencies, and Dynastic Succession is a follow-on to that theory.

A 2025 Q4 Archive of a 2018 JFK/RFK Lead Causing Panic



At the McMartin preschool Ed Donegan asserts his study was related to the Obama JR. being studied of the same concealed family history or part of it.
